C. CISCO THINQUBATOR PROGRAM.

Create a platform for young innovators to turn their ideas into prototypes and businesses. The name “thingQbator” is a combination of ‘Internet of Things’ and ‘Incubator’. ThingQbator was started as an internal incubator of IoT ideas coming from Cisco’s engineering community. With the central belief that none of us is smarter than all of us, the aim was to create maker spaces where IoT enthusiasts could learn more about digital technologies in a hands-on environment and turn their ideas into working prototypes.

Inspired by the success of our internal maker spaces Cisco has come up with the concept of “thingQbator for Universities”, a virtual maker space and program to help universities and academic institutions accelerate innovation around IoT and digital technologies in their campus toward the goal of creating startups.

There are people with bikes who have empty seats and there are people who want to sit on those empty seats, I wanted to build a connection between them. Thanks to REVA NEST it wasn't a complicated process.

Apart from just standard working space REVA NEST has provided my company with extra facilities like mentorship, industry experts, network connections, event conduction, investment support, etc. It is "a space to make your dreams come true!"
